WES OF THE IRISH

INDIANAPOLIS IRISHMEN DESCRIBED CONDITIONS IN IRELAND.

Maurice Donnelly and Thomas J. Lynch in That Country at the Time of Greatest Trouble.

TALK OF A POLITICAL CRIME

CLAIM MADE BY DEFENDANTS IN THE LYNCHING CASE.

Testimony May Be Concluded To-Day and Argument Begun To-Morrow—Lynch's Statement.

As the evidence in the case of James Lynch, the Irish fugitive whom the English government is trying to extradite, proceeds new stories of the woes of Irish tenants in the old country are told. In an effort to prove that the crime for which Lynch was sentenced to life imprisonment was a political crime the attorneys for the defendant are examining a number of witnesses who were in Ireland previous to 1894, the year of Lynch's crime. They are attempting to show that in the decade previous to that year the conditions in Ireland were leading to a conflict between tenants and landlords, and that the crime of Lynch was perpetrated in the cause of tenantry freedom. The point is important for the reason that if it can be shown that the crime was a political one there can be no extradition, according to the treaty.

Yesterday was devoted to further examination of witnesses, among whom were two Irishmen of this city who were in Ireland during the movement of the Irish Revolutionary Brotherhood, formed to protect the tenants from the oppression of the lords. They were Maurice Donnelly and Thomas J. Lynch. Both testified as to the outrages inflicted upon tenants by the landlords. Mr. Donnelly has been taking an active part in the case for Lynch, and has been a leader in the movement among the Irish people of this city to aid the prisoner and his family. While on the stand he said that he left Ireland in 1879 and revisited the country in 1882. He told of evictions he had witnessed, one case in particular where a battering ram was used to knock the house to pieces, in spite of the pleas of the tenants for their families. The case was that of a family who were evicted from their home, and died later, being exposed to the weather. He also related that the members of the I. R. B. were at that time drilling during the night in order to be prepared to strike for their liberty when the opportunity arose.

MR. LYNCH'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. Lynch testified to about the same conditions as those described by Mr. Donnelly. He was in Ireland in 1880, on the estate of the Duke of Devonshire. He said the meetings of the Land League were always held in Gaelic, as it was dangerous to speak English. The clergy of the land, he said, both Protestant and Catholic, were in sympathy with the movement against the landlord.

Only a one-hour session of the court was held yesterday afternoon, on account of the meeting of the State Bar Association in the Federal court room. The court convened at 4 o'clock, and Lynch was again placed on the stand. In the testimony a question arose as to whether or not Lynch had a right to tell the motives that prompted him and his associates to deed. Commissioner Moore decided that he was allowed to tell the motives that prompted him, but he could not testify as to his associates.

The question then arose whether he committed the crime as an individual or in league with others. Attorney General Fox said that if it were done as an individual the crime did not fall under a political head, but if it was done in league with others, the crime was political. The defense made the point that it was a political crime, and that the case should rest on the testimony of the fugitive.

The testimony of Lynch brought out that he was only one of a party that attacked Agnes McDonald. There were six or seven in the party, but Lynch was the only one arrested. He was taken the following morning to Castlbar, where he escaped, but was returned and held on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Judge Gibson, of Castlbar, assisted by the attorney general, tried and convicted him. Lynch testified that his act was done to further the movement for liberty.

The court will continue this afternoon, and the evidence will be completed, it is expected. The argument of the case will probably be taken up this morning.

It is said by Irishmen of this city that the case has done more to bring to light conditions in Ireland than any meeting the Irish people have ever held in America.

SIMON YANDES MEMORIAL.

Tribute to His Life by Former Associates in the Law.

A meeting of the Bar Association of this city was held in the Federal Court room yesterday afternoon to take action on the death of Simon Yandes, the oldest practitioner at the bar in this State. The meeting was presided over by W. H. H. Miller. Many prominent attorneys spoke on Mr. Yandes's life and his qualifications as a lawyer. Among those present were Addison C. Harris, John R. Wilson, Edward Daniels, John T. Dye, Harry Milligan, Gen. John Coburn, Ferdinand Winter, John S. Duncan, Louis Newberger, Chas. W. Smith, Frank E. Gavin and Merrill Moore.

Mr. Daniels read the following memorial, which was adopted:

"The long and useful life of Simon Yandes has peacefully closed. What words save the simplest are requisite to tell its story? What picture of it save the truthfulness would he himself bid us draw? What praise save the sincerest would he bid us utter?"

"Simon Yandes was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, May 15, 1835, his birthplace of the State. He came with his parents to the town of Indianapolis in 1821—the year in which the town of Indianapolis was laid out. Thenceforward Indianapolis, as village, town and city, continued to be his home until the day of his death. He died in Washington street on Oct. 5, 1933. As a youth he attended a private school in Indianapolis taught by Ebenezer Sharpe, and later he spent two years at the Indiana State University. In 1858 he went to the Harvard law school, where his instructors were Justice William Brewster and Simon Greenleaf, among his fellow-students were William M. Everts, afterward secretary of state in President Hayes's cabinet, and Charles Devens, afterward attorney general in President Hayes's cabinet. Justice Story was, in Mr. Yandes's opinion, almost an ideal jurist, and the relation of his work to the world was intimate, and after Mr. Yandes had received his degree in the Harvard law school, in 1858, and returned to Indianapolis, his relations were continued by correspondence. Mr. Yandes was also an occasional correspondent of Judge Hoar, Judge Devens and Mr. Everts.

"Upon his return to Indianapolis Mr. Yandes became a partner of Fletcher & Butler, later he became a partner of Oliver H. Smith and afterwards of Cyrus C. Hines. In 1858 Mr. Yandes was a candidate for the Supreme bench on the Republican ticket, with Col. Abram W. Hendricks, Judge Horace P. Biddle and William D. Griswold, of Terre Haute. This nomination did not come, and Mr. Yandes was an active contestant for the position. F. M. Finch being Mr. Yandes's competitor. Mr. Yandes's practice was largely confined both in the Federal and the State courts. Important probate, commercial and corporate interests were placed in his charge by home and foreign clients. He was not a jury lawyer, but as a pleader at common law and in equity and as a practitioner before the judge he was regarded as the peer of our law. His work was precise but not technical, logical but not coldly analytic, well read in the law but not pedantically precise. His integrity was a granite rock and his intellectual poise was akin to it. He did not have that large imagination which is needed for the making of an orator, but his full information, happy humor and power of accurate statement made him a strong speaker. As a counselor he was at his best. His fair-mindedness, his wide foresight and his strong mental grasp qualified him to see all sides of a question and to advise a course which always proved to be the right one.

"As a lawyer, his chief limitation was personal to himself; it was his habit of making his clients' cause his own. His twenty years of active practice the nervous strain of this habit had begun to tell on his physical health, and from this cause coupled with the fact that he had been able to accumulate a fortune of something like $200,000, and that he thought himself qualified to become a successful investor of capital, Mr. Yandes began to retire from the practice of law and in a few years he was giving his whole attention to his own business. As a business man he was exceptionally successful. His aggregate wealth, computed property disclosed as well as that retained, was $300,000. The last year of his life, over $80,000, Mr. Yandes never married and having no direct heirs, he, by his will, bequeathed his estate to settle his own estate, began years ago to make large gifts to educational and religious objects, and he continued down to the time of his death, and by trust arrangement he also made ample provision for his relatives.

"Simon Yandes was tall and spare, in physical frame, and was the dominant characteristic of his mind. His moral life was without flaw or twist. His mind was the mind of Abraham Lincoln. Under an exterior of reserve he kept an equable mind, a generous nature and a courageous spirit. He was proud of the fact that he was a member of the Indiana bar. The Indiana bar is proud of Simon Yandes as well for what he was as for what he did."

ATTACKED BY A WAITER

W. C. BAYNE, COLUMBIA CLUB STEWARD, DANGEROUSLY STABBED.

R. E. Clayton, a Colored Employee, Inflicted Several Wounds With a Knife and Escaped.

W. C. Bayne, steward at the Columbia Club, was last night seriously stabbed by R. E. Clayton, a colored waiter, who imagined he had a grievance against his superior. Clayton provoked a quarrel with Mr. Bayne, it is said, and struck him several times, and when Bayne struck back the negro attacked him with a knife, inflicting six or eight deep and ugly wounds, which, it is said, may result fatally.

With three gashes in his back, two in his abdomen and one in his chest, Mr. Bayne struck his assailant, knocking him prostrate to the floor, but in an instant the colored man was on his feet and before he could be headed off ran out of the club building and disappeared in the darkness. After the excitement of the encounter was over Mr. Bayne realized that he was seriously injured and became very weak from loss of blood. He was attended by Dr. George V. Combs and taken to his home on North East street in a carriage.

Dr. Combs said last night that while Mr. Bayne was seriously injured his wounds would not necessarily prove fatal. The unfortunate affair is being investigated by the Columbia Club and every effort will be made to bring the guilty negro to justice, although he succeeded in eluding the police.

At this point the mayor sent one of his flashing remarks home to Mr. Dunn and they were turned the laugh on the city stenographer, who was transcribing the mayor's speech just before he was attacked. "I'm not mad," he said, "but the fellows that are mad." Relative to the incident he remarked that he was in a very bad temper in every meeting with a short-hand stenographer in an attempt to catch him up some statements. "But I notice that they don't print them. I only wish they would print them. I only wish they would print them. I only wish they would print them."

He printed the speech of Mr. Newlin Thursday night at Masonic Hall, in which he said the editor of the News upbraided him for fighting Holtzman on his record. Mr. Newlin said that the editor offered him special advertisements on condition that he would not carry the war too bitterly against Holtzman and would lend his assistance in defending Holtzman.

WOMAN ON HEALTH BOARD

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN MAY ASK SUCH AN OFFICIAL.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall Sends a Communication to the Body—Outline of the Meeting.

The Local Council of Women convened for the first time since the summer's vacation yesterday afternoon at the Propylaeum. Opening chairs for the delegates and officers of the affiliated societies, the personnel of the council differed from that of the last meeting of the previous year, but the same spirit of earnestness was evident in the actions of the body.

The preliminary business occupied the first hour of the meeting, and included the introduction of several resolutions, the most important of which was one introduced by Mrs. H. H. Hall as delegate of the Young Woman's Christian Association, urging that the members of the women's clubs of the city contribute to a fund for employing a woman official at the Union Station, whose business it should be to direct young women who are strangers in the city to reputable boarding houses and lodgings. The resolution created much feeling and was warmly adopted. Mrs. Day, the president of the council, spoke of the urgent need of a garden committee for the purpose of beautifying the yards and lawns of the city and commended Mrs. Sewall's earnest advocacy of this movement and her efforts through the summer to accomplish some definite results in this work. Following Mrs. Day's talk the secretary read a communication from Mrs. Sewall, who asked the council's consideration of four points: Her resignation of the chairmanship of the garden committee, the consideration of the resignation of the national executive of the council this year, her withdrawal from the chairmanship of the committee on the city's sanitation next spring and her urgent desire that the council should effect the appointment of a woman to the city health board. Later in the afternoon this last resolution was taken up by Mrs. Moody, who introduced the resolution. The resolution should send letters to each one of the three candidates for the position of health officer, asking him to promise that he should be appointed to such a position. Mrs. Moody said that she was in a mood to promise anything, and the resolution was carried. The question of Saturday or Monday pay days was also taken up. Mrs. Moody in her report of the work of the Consumers' League and she advocated the appointment of a woman to the position of health officer. She said that she was in a mood to promise anything, and the resolution was carried.

LECTURE ON ATHLETICS.

Rev. Mackintosh's Address to the Students of Shortridge High School.

The Shortridge students met in the hall yesterday morning for the first time this year to hear an address by Rev. Mackintosh of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. Mr. Beaton introduced the speaker and also warned the students to be moderate in their applause on all occasions.

Mr. Mackintosh announced his subject as "Athletics in General." He said the reason that most of our prominent men were country boys is because the lad who lives on the farm is more fully developed in every direction. He gets plenty of exercise and this is largely the reason why he can concentrate his mind upon a subject when the time comes. He also compared the followers of Monasticism to the Greeks who have left more to posterity than any other people. He said that the athletic work of the court has done under his administration and asked if any fair citizen could say that it needed reforming.

ENTHUSIASM OF VOTERS

GREAT REPUBLICAN MEETING IN WEST INDIANAPOLIS.

The Crowd Enjoys the Points Scored by Mayor Bookwalter Against the Indianapolis News.

"HIT IT HARDER, CHARLIE"

SUCH EXCLAMATIONS FREQUENT THROUGHOUT HIS SPEECH.

The Mayor Cordially Welcomed at Harding and Morris Streets—Other Republican Meetings.

"Hit it harder, hit it harder, Charlie," was the prompting cry at the Republican meeting last night at the corner of Harding and Morris streets, West Indianapolis, while Mayor Bookwalter was making his speech and dealing the Indianapolis News a few blows on the side. Although it has been said by some people that the mayor's speech would be much more effective if he did not devote so much of his time to scoring the News, it was shown in the meeting last night that the people cannot get enough of this kind of political repartee. Every shot which Mayor Bookwalter fired at the News last night—his greater part of his speech to the work done by the city administration, curtailing to some extent his attack on the News.

DEBT OF THE CITY. The point that he emphasized in the report of the Citizens' League was the charge that the debt of the city had been increased nearly $300,000 by the present city administration. He said that if he could prove the falsity of one statement it could be inferred whether or not the others could stand water. He began by enumerating the bonds that had been issued for bookwalter and other purposes, the total number aggregating a bond issue of $150,000 instead of nearly $300,000, as stated by the report. At the same time he showed that $83,000 of the bonded debt had been paid off, cutting down the debt to $67,000. Further, he showed that where the administration had issued bonds the city had profited. His final figures demonstrated that the city administration is $80,000 better off than two years ago. He drove his argument home by saying that the figures were on the books open to the inspection of any who cared to examine them and ascertain their correctness.

At this point the mayor sent one of his flashing remarks home to Mr. Dunn and they were turned the laugh on the city stenographer, who was transcribing the mayor's speech just before he was attacked. "I'm not mad," he said, "but the fellows that are mad." Relative to the incident he remarked that he was in a very bad temper in every meeting with a short-hand stenographer in an attempt to catch him up some statements. ## TUMBLING FROM SCAFFOLD.

George Rhoades, Seventy-Four Years Old, Painfully Injured.

George Rhoades, a carpenter living at the corner of Washington street and Temple avenue, fell from a scaffold yesterday while at work on a new house on Temple avenue and was painfully injured. His left hip was badly bruised, and it is feared that the joint may be impaired. Mr. Rhoades is seventy-four years old, and it is said, comes from a wealthy family in California, but owing to a roving disposition in his youthful days he has been forced, in his old age, to work at the carpenter's trade for a living. He was taken to the City Hospital in the Dispensary ambulance, attended by Drs. Mackey and Sheek.
